TWO CHILDREN DIE IN COLUMBUS FIRE

Bond Proposal Again Submitted By School Board

CITY VOTERS TO DECIDE ISSUE HERE ON MAY 6

Funds To Be Used For New Buildings, Improvements On Present Schools

Voters in Circleville and Circleville township will ballot May 6 "for" or "against" a $387,000 bond issue proposed by the Circleville board of education for improvements to school buildings in the Circleville city school district.

The school board has certified to the Pickaway county board of elections a copy of a bond issue resolution which was adopted unanimously by the school board at a meeting held Tuesday.

The balloting on the proposed school bond issue will be at a special election which is to be held simultaneously with the regular May 6 primary election.

THE RESOLUTION adopted by the school board and certified to the board of elections declares that issuance of $387,000 in bonds, dated June 1, 1947, and maturing over a 21½ year period ending June 1, 1969 with interest not to exceed 3 per cent per annum, is "necessary" for the purpose of acquiring lands and constructing and equipping permanent improvements for use by and in the Circleville school district system, and to improve fireproof and non-fireproof buildings.

In order to pay the interest and to retire the proposed bonds, the resolution says, it would be necessary to annually levy on all taxable property in the Circleville city school district, a direct tax outside of the 10-mill limitation, and that the county auditor has calculated such levy would be 24 cents on each $100 of valuation.

The resolution further says that the bonds would be in $1,000 denomination, and would mature at intervals beginning June 1, 1948.

A similar proposal failed in May, 1946, when the issue failed to gain the necessary 65 per cent of votes cast.

MOLOTOV SAYS AGREEMENT ON REICH POSSIBLE

LONDON, April 4—Soviet Foreign Minister Molotov today expressed belief that Russia and the western allies can reach a compromise solution on the future of Germany.

His views were given in answer to a series of questions by radio commentator Johannes Steel and broadcast by the controlled Soviet radio system.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

By Walter Klerman

The decision by congress to go home for Easter was smart. It was obvious no rabbits were being pulled out of hats in Washington.

In New York, Mayor O'Dwyer has announced a higher tax rate and a Spring cleaning to run concurrently — empty lots and full wallets will both receive attention.

In Chicago, Mayor Ed Kelly says he is retiring from politics. He believes 14 years is enough for any official.

Because of Kelly's previous good service to the Democratic party he will not be reprimanded for his unorthodox views.

But it's as hard to imagine Chicago without Kelly as Jersey City without Frank Hague—a thought which Republicans wistfully turn over in their minds.

Anyway it must be Spring—a baseball just came through my window.

Cloudy, Cool Is Forecast For Easter

The Easter Sunday weather prediction for Ohio: "Cloudy, windy and rather cool."

(Which means the girls can sport their new bonnets as long as they are well-anchored on their heads. In the same sense they can put on their new Spring suits if they cover them over with topcoats.)

Forecasters said that more rain was coming into the state today and that intermittent showers would continue through Saturday.

Weatherman Milton Davis said there was a good chance the rain will be over by Sunday morning, but the sky would be overcast and there was little prospect for a sunny day.

The Sunday chill was expected to increase through the day, with even lower temperatures by the first of the week.

MORE PRESSURE PUT ON RUSSIA

Big Four Conference Said Ready To Collapse If Reds Do Not Yield

By International News Service

Representatives of the western powers in Moscow brought pressure on Russia today to make some manner of concession to save the Big Four parley from complete failure.

The conference was viewed as being on the brink of collapse unless the Soviet government, playing host to the conferees, decides to do a little bargaining in connection with stern demands.

Despite the decision of the American delegation not to allow Russia's claim for 10 billion dollars worth of reparations and British indications that they will go along with the U. S. in walking away from Moscow if nothing is achieved soon, the Soviet attitude stiffened.

A hint of what is in the offing was seen in the sudden departure from Moscow yesterday of Lieut. Gen. Lucius D. Clay who

FARM YOUTH IS ASKED TO GIVE TRAINING VIEWS

COLUMBUS, O., April 4—A 20-year-old Ohio officer of the Future Farmers association was invited today by President Truman to attend a White House conference on universal military training.

Phillip Shober, McCutchenville (Wyandot county), national secretary of the association, accepted the telephoned invitation to meet on April 11 with the President's advisory committee on military training. The call was relayed through Dr. Clyde Hissong, state education director.

The White House said Shober would be asked to express the views of the Future Farmers of America on military training.

IOWA MAN IS REUNITED WITH HIS 16TH WIFE

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., April 4—James F. Williams, Iowa's 65-year-old "Tommy Manville" was reunited with his 16th wife today.

Williams said he found his bride, Louise, in the union depot late last night and that she explained she had been helping a neighbor with her spring cleaning.

Phone Strike Effect On Service Here Unknown

Whether Circleville telephone workers will join in the threatened nation-wide telephone strike scheduled to start at 6 a. m. Monday was undetermined.

Officials of the Ohio Consolidated Telephone company, declined to comment on the situation other than to say the company had received no strike notice from the union. They would not predict whether the Circleville workers will remain at their posts in the event the strike becomes effective.

Most of the local operators, it was reported, are members of the Ohio Federation of Telephone Workers which, according to a dispatch from Cleveland was completing preparations Friday for the walkout Monday morning.

Word from Cleveland said union officials assigned members to picket duty and offered to furnish emergency service for handling police, disaster, fire, and hospital calls on condition

ARMY OFFICERS' UNIFORMS WILL REMAIN SAME

WASHINGTON, April 4—Enlisted men in the Army knew today that their officers would continue to wear different uniforms until June 30, 1949, instead of June 30, 1948.

A widely publicized war department circular issued about a year ago decreed that after June 30, 1948, officers and men would wear the same olive drab winter uniform, with matching short jackets and trousers.

Another circular, however, was issued recently rescinding many of the provisions of the original decree and allowing officers to continue resplendent in "pink" pants and "green" blouses and shirts for another year.

In addition, constant denials from official sources failed to kill entirely rumors that the air forces, if granted autonomy under the merger act, would blossom out in uniforms of royal air force blue.

One uniform definitely is not going to appear, and that is the dress blue the Army displayed prominently several months ago. Economy was given as the chief reason for abandonment of the blue, but many GI's made no bones about the fact they wanted to look like soldiers, not park guards.

Army spokesmen insist the continuance of the different uniforms for officers is forced by fiscal reasons. They say that to force a change next year would cost too much money.

Economy also was given as one of the reasons for the original order putting officers and enlisted men in the same uniform.

TWO KILLED, 50 ARE INJURED IN TRAIN WRECK

Fast Passenger Cracks Up When Farm Tractor Falls On Track

CHICAGO, April 4—A second passenger aboard a luxurious streamlined passenger train wrecked at suburban Downers Grove last night, died today.

More than 50 persons were injured.

Miss Edith Helland, 22, Minneapolis, died in Hinsdale sanitarium of injuries suffered in the wreck.

Lloyd Wright, 48, suburban Oak Park, was the other person killed.

Wright was returning home from a business trip to spend the Easter holidays with his wife and two sons.

A triple investigation of the wreck of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad's "twin city Zephyr" was launched.

The streamliner, en route to Chicago from Minneapolis, was only a few minutes out of the terminal. It was traveling at a speed of 75 miles an hour when the big diesel locomotive struck a 14-ton caterpillar tractor as it toppled off the flat car of a passing westbound freight train.

The three investigating agencies were the Illinois Commerce commission, the railroad and DuPage county officials.

It was less than a year ago—April 23—that these same investigators gathered at a point just nine miles west, on the mainline of the Burlington.

That wreck, caused by the rear-end collision of two streamliners, killed 43 persons and injured 111.

The diesel and all seven cars of the train left the track last night.

One of the coaches was ripped open by the impact. Bricks from the station showered the two cars, breaking windows. Most of the injured were riding in these cars.

TRUMAN URGES ALL TO WORSHIP ON GOOD FRIDAY

WASHINGTON, April 4—President Truman today urged the people of the United States to participate actively in Good Friday church services.

The chief executive wrote, in a Good Friday message for the Washington Times-Herald:

"The world in these latter years has learned many lessons which the mystery of sorrow teaches.

"I trust, therefore, that the people of this nation will participate actively in church services during the sacred period on this day and exemplifying by their daily lives those noble Christian virtues."

Survey Shows Need For Control Of Spread Of Social Diseases In City

Need for a greater health program — particularly regarding venereal diseases such as syphilis — in Circleville and Pickaway county was disclosed by a survey completed Friday.

While officials disagreed somewhat as to whether an unusual number of cases now exist in the community and although physicians consulted were not in complete agreement on the danger of the spread of syphilis there was general agreement on the need for proper regulation and treatment.

The survey also revealed the need for a venereal disease clinic in Circleville and for a unified health program with a merger of the health boards of Circleville and Pickaway county under one administrative head to promote efficiency and best results in safeguarding public health.

Dr. A. D. Blackburn, county health commissioner, and other officials, emphasized that any person suffering from syphilis may obtain a cure, and that if they are unprepared or unwilling to undergo treatment by their own physician they can obtain free treatment from the clinic of the U. S. Public Health Service located at Dillonvale.

CHARGE OF ASSAULT with intent to commit murder has been placed against Ray Glenn Stumbaugh (right) by North Aurora, Ill., authorities. The 16-year-old boy, according to police, admits he shot Eugene Garnett, 49, in his Fox river cottage because he wanted "to see somebody die." Deputy Sheriff Harry Crawford of Kane county holds .22-caliber rifle allegedly used by Stumbaugh.

Stronger Safety Laws For Mines Indicated

WASHINGTON, April 4—A drive was underway today in congress to enact stronger federal laws as a result of the Centralia, Ill., mine disaster and the closing of 513 unsafe coal operations by the government.

The campaign was impelled by John L. Lewis who painted a graphic picture of the hazards of coal mining and accused congress of having contributed by its negligence to the toll of 85 miners who lost their lives each month beneath the earth.

Rep. Schwabe (R) Mo., chairman of a house labor subcommittee on welfare, said his group was impressed by Lewis' testimony and added:

"We may very well prepare a pretty strong safety bill."

Schwabe indicated that he favored adopting a recommendation of the United Mine Workers union president that federal mine inspectors be authorized by law to close down any mine they found to be unsafe.

OHIO MINERS TAKE VACATION

MARTINS FERRY, O., April 4—Miners in the eastern Ohio West Virginia Panhandle area appeared today to have turned John L. Lewis' "mourning" period into a vacation.

With the exception of three dedication meetings presided over by AFL-United Mine Workers officials, no general Centralia memorial is being observed. No flags are lowered in districts housing 15,000 miners, and only about 125 of a potential 6,000 diggers attended a meeting at Dillonvale.

Although the pit workers are showing reverence for the 111 men who lost their lives in the Illinois disaster, most of them are busy fishing, planting gardens, cleaning house and doing odd jobs.

The families appear vastly more interested in Interior Secretary Krug's "shutdown" order than they are in the Centralia blast. One miner's wife said: "It won't hurt to double-check on safety."

McNARNEY SEES POSSIBILITY OF GERMAN SPLITUP

WASHINGTON, April 4—Gen. Joseph T. McNarney asserted today that Soviet intentions in occupied Germany "are bound up with the Russian desire to see their own ideology cover the world."

The former commander of American forces in Europe told a news conference that possible failure of the Moscow conference of foreign ministers might force establishment of a separate German state, consisting of U. S. and British zones.

He declared, "there is a possibility of a separate state. At the present, I don't think it is a probability."

FLAMES SWEEP BOARDING HOUSE FOR CHILDREN

Operators, Seven Others Are Burned In Early Morning Blaze

COLUMBUS, April 4—Two children burned to death in flash fire which resulted from an exploding heating stove in a Columbus boarding house early today.

The dead were Barbara Ann Schirtzinger, 9 months, who suffocated, and either Princess Rogers, 9, or her sister Wanda, 10, who burned to death. Hospital authorities were unable to obtain a positive identification. The living sister was in very critical condition.

Seven other children were burned. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Thompson, who operated the boarding home, were injured trying to rescue the children.

Police and firemen who responded to the alarm carried the other children out through doors and down ladders.

All the children but Estelle Thompson, 4, received third-degree burns. The Thompson girl was in very serious condition with a head injury and lacerations of the hands and legs.

Those who were burned were: Kathleen Rogers, 12, Wanda Rogers, 10, Nancy Lee Carnes, Linda Lee Daley, 4, Betty Thompson, 10, Robert Thompson, 1.

Hospital attendants said Mrs. Thompson also received third degree burns and was in critical condition. Thompson had a possible fractured ankle and burns on the face and neck. His condition was listed as fair.

Thompson related that flames flashed out of the door of the heating stove on the ground floor as he was shaking the grates. They ignited a rag in his hand and jumped to paper drapes. The hangings spread the fire through the house.

Thompson said that he aroused his wife who awakened the children. The husband, meanwhile, broke a second-story bathroom window and leaped to the ground.

Mrs. Thompson grabbed the youngsters and dropped them out of the broken window to her husband below. She said she remembered saving only five.

REYNOLDS SET FOR TRY AT NEW FLIGHT RECORD

NEW YORK, April 4—One minute after midnight tonight Milton Reynolds, 54, Chicago manufacturer, will take off from LaGuardia field in his silver and blue private plane, the "Reynolds Bombshell," in an attempt to break the world's record for a flight around the globe.

The "Bombshell," a converted A-26 Douglas bomber, can cruise at more than 400 miles an hour and Reynolds said today he hoped to make the 18,500 mile journey in "less than 55 hours."

Brief stops for refueling will be made at Paris, Cairo, Calcutta, Shanghai, Tokyo and Anchorage, Alaska.

The present record for circumnavigation of the globe by airplane is 91 hours, 14 minutes, set by Howard Hughes in 1938.

Reynolds and two others will make the flight. Reynolds will go as a passenger. At the controls will be 27-year-old Captain William P. Odom, Roslyn, L. I., who during the war was a pilot and navigator for the R A F ferry command. The co-pilot and engineer will be Carroll ("Tex") Sallee, Dallas, Texas.

ton, and the fireman, John H. Brummel, both of Aurora, Ill., were taken out of the overturned engine, each suffering a broken leg and bruises.
Most of the cars were filled with students from Minnesota and visitors to Chicago for the Easter weekend.
Lowell Hendrickson, 21, Montevideo, Minn., a student at Bethel college, St. Paul, was on his way to spend Easter with friends in Cincinnati. Hendrickson said:
"I was on the second car behind the engine. There was a severe jolt, and a flash of flames. Sparks flew from a fuel tank on the rear of the engine which exploded."
Hendrickson said he was seated two seats behind the man who was killed. He himself was uninjured.

SENATE FOES OF LILIENTHAL CONCEDE DEFEAT

WASHINGTON, April 4—Leaders of the senate opposition to David E. Lilienthal conceded today that he will be confirmed as the nation's atomic chief, probably on Tuesday.
A 52 to 38 victory for Lilienthal supporters on the first senate test—on recommending the nominations to the committee—apparently swept away the threat of prolonged debate next week.
Sen. Taft (R) Ohio, GOP policy committee chairman, said a vote would be reached Tuesday or Wednesday, and predicted that final results will be little changed from the test vote count.
Sen. Wherry (R) Neb., GOP whip, who led the floor battle against the Lilienthal nominations, said flatly that there would be no prolonged debate aimed at forcing the senate to sidetrack them to make way for consideration of the Greek-Turkish loan.

MURDER AT SEA

BALTIMORE, April 4—A grim story of "murder on the high seas" was reported to federal authorities today by wireless from the Baltimore-bound freighter "Eakins". The messages said that a sailor, identified as Milton Dos Santos, said to be Brazilian, had fatally stabbed a shipmate, John MacDonald, Boston.

COUPLE MARRIED

CINCINNATI, April 4—Mrs. Katie Owens, Cincinnati, announced today that her slighter brother-in-law, Charles Owens, was married last night in Indianapolis to Miss Florence Frutchee, 29, the Columbus blind woman with whom he eloped Monday.

ATTITUDE UNCHANGED

WASHINGTON, April 4—Acting Secretary of State Dean Acheson declared today that the regency decree for Spain sought by Generalissimo Franco will not change the United States attitude toward the present Spanish government.

BULLET WOUND FATAL

BUENOS AIRES, April 4—Fourteen-year-old Jack Zurcher, Buenos Aires, died today in Buenos Aires city hospital after firing a bullet into the base of his brain because his parents refused to let him quit school.

AUTO PRICES UP

DETROIT, April 4—The Hudson Motor Car company announced in Detroit today that prices on its new cars have been increased $25 to $69, effective immediately.

'GANG' ARRESTED

CLEVELAND, April 4—Police arrested today a six-man gang which they said was responsible for at least 13 robberies and burglaries since last September in Cleveland.

the Ohio Bell Telephone company does not assign management personnel to the same jobs. A Bell spokesman at Cleveland indicated that the company would carry on emergency service with its own supervisors if the walkout is called, but Cleveland local service and dial telephones would not be shut off. It was asserted that the threatened strike would call approximately 20,000 Ohio telephone workers off their jobs.
If the strike becomes effective, generally, long distance calls from and to Circleville would of course be hard hit but Circleville local service would continue without disruption — unless the operators leave their jobs at the Circleville manually-operated telephone plant.

LABOR BILLS TO BE SETTLED AT GOP CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, April 4—GOP leaders decided today to hold a conference of all Republican senators on labor legislation one week from tomorrow, by which time they hope to have a labor bill reported from committee.
Sen. Robert A. Taft (R) O., chairman of the Republican policy committee, announced that the labor bill probably will be followed on the senate agenda by the Republican tax bill.
Taft disclosed that the senate labor committee, which he also heads, has before it a "tentative draft" of an omnibus labor measure which he expects to make public next Monday or Tuesday.
Taft reiterated that he believes the senate will dispose of the David E. Lilienthal nomination by Tuesday, take up the Greek-Turkish assistance bill immediately thereafter, and follow this measure with the labor bill Monday, he announced, the senate will call up bills dealing with importation of farm labor and price support of wool, the authority for which expires April 15.

DIVORCE SUIT FILED

Mrs. Margaret M. Robinson filed suit for divorce in Pickaway county common pleas court, Friday, accusing Claude E. Robinson, whereabouts unknown, of gross neglect of duty. Her petition, which contains no details of the accusation, says they were married Feb. 18, 1940 in Circleville. In addition to a divorce Mrs. Robinson asks for alimony and the custody of their four minor children, Margaret Marinda, 1, Thomas Nelson, 3, Carol Elizabeth, 5, and Florence Marie, 6.

LEAVES FOR JAPAN

Captain Paul L. Bowsher, Circleville, sailed Thursday from San Francisco, Calif., to his new military assignment in Japan. Captain Bowsher served with the 37th Division in the South Pacific theater during World War II and had recently been stationed at San Francisco. His wife, Mrs. Ruth Bowsher, now in Circleville, plans to join him later in Japan.

LINCOLN HURLS CHALLENGE TO CO-OP CRITICS

COLUMBUS, O., April 4—Farm Bureau federation executive secretary Murray D. Lincoln challenged opponents of the cooperative movement today to "do a better job" if they wished to "beat the co-ops."
Speaking at the annual convention of the Farm Bureau's insurance companies, Lincoln predicted that current attacks, centered in a state legislature drive to tax co-operatives, would actually strengthen the movement.
Lincoln, himself under fire for alleged one-man control of the organization, said the criticism was providing "priceless publicity" to the organizations.
The charges against Lincoln were made by Edwin Bath, former Farm Bureau lobbyist, who is now assistant to agriculture director Frank Farnsworth.
More than 2,000 agents and policy holders were in attendance at the insurance sessions.

RECOMMENDATIONS FOR LIQUOR SETUP HELD UP

COLUMBUS, O., April 4—Tentative agreement on five recommendations was reported today to have been reached by the senate's special liquor investigating committee in the probe of the state monopoly.

Sen. Roscoe R. Walcott (R-Columbus), committee chairman, said, however, that no announcement could be made until the committee has taken more definite action. Walcott said there would likely be one or two more meetings before any report is agreed upon.

DYNAMITE TRACED

SANTA ANA, CAL., April 4—The Los Angeles Examiner said today a receipt for the purchase of 50 sticks of dynamite in Chatsworth on March 14 had been found in the effects of George (Bud) Gollum, 21. Gollum is under indictment with Beulah Louise Overell, 17, for the Newport harbor yacht blast murder of her wealthy parents, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Overell.

GEORGE WARDELL

George Wardell, 82, prominent Pickaway county farmer who lived all of his life within six miles of his Wayne township birthplace, died at 12:15 a. m. Friday in his home.

Mr. Wardell was born Oct. 2, 1864, the son of John Wardell and Mary Clearwater Wardell. His wife, Mrs. Ella B. Henry Wardell, preceded him in death several years ago.

Survivors are a son, Edward H. Wardell; a sister, Mrs. Charles Carmean; a brother, Thomas Wardell; a granddaughter, Dorothy Drake, Circleville; a grandson, Lloyd E. Wardell, Columbus; and two great-grandchildren, Lydia Wardell and John Wardell, both of Columbus.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Easter Sunday in the Methodist church at Williamsport. The Rev. Clarence Swearingen and the Rev. J. H. Sudlow will officiate. Burial will be in Spring Lawn cemetery under direction of the Hill funeral home, Williamsport. Friends may call at the residence until time for the services.

MRS. CHARLES PHILLIPS

Mrs. Elizabeth B. Phillips, 85, native of Pickaway county and wife of Charles Phillips, died Thursday in her home at 2388 Adams avenue, Columbus.

Besides her husband Mrs. Phillips is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Bess Spangler, and Miss Margie Phillips, both of Columbus; three sons, Ray E. Phillips, Columbus; and George H. Phillips and Charles Phillips, Jr., both of Pickaway county; two sisters, Mrs. Arthur Cowley and Mrs. Charles Turbett, both of Columbus; and nine grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Arrangements for the funeral are in charge of the P. E. Ruthford funeral home, Columbus. Burial will be in the Hitler-Ludwig cemetery in Pickaway county. Friends may call at the funeral home.

REV. ADDISON E. DAVIS

The Rev. Addison E. Davis, 89, who was widely known in Circleville and who led the United Brethren church conferences, died April 1, in the home of his daughter at Sidney, it was learned Friday.

Funeral services were to be conducted Friday in the First Evangelical United Brethren church at Sidney.

GIRL'S DEATH MYSTERY

WASHINGTON, April 4—Police authorities were stumped today in their investigation of the death of a pretty, 25-year-old Philippine embassy secretary whose body was found beneath a culvert on the Virginia shore of the Potomac river. Dr. W. C. Welburn, Arlington county coroner, said the girl, Wynona Harvey, Washington, D. C., had been dead "two or three days" but there was "no evidence of foul play or violence."

COAL OPERATORS FEAR MINERS WILL STAY OUT

PITTSBURGH, April 4—A growing concern arose today among the nation's bituminous coal producers that a majority of miners would not return to work Monday when the mourning period for the victims of the Wamac, Ill., disaster ends.

Despite Interior Secretary J. A. Krug's order closing 518 mines for reasons of safety, operators feared united mine workers' locals in many other pits would refuse to work until "safety measures" were taken.

Their fears were heightened by a statement at Logan, W. Va., by local UMW president William Blizard who told a gathering of 1000 miners:

"If Krug shut down 518 mines, we ought to exercise our right, and if 518 others are not safe we should shut them down. We'll only go back to work in the mines that are safe."

"We always get an April first vacation for two or three weeks. We need it. It gives the operators a chance for repairs."

"We will always have a vacation sometime in the Spring and this is it."

The pit workers don't seem to consider the average pay loss of $75 a week important. They feel that they can afford a couple of weeks' vacation "even if it costs a lot."

Meanwhile, the mine operators estimated that 1,500 to 2,000 men are working steadily on maintenance, while the diggers stay out of the pits.

LOUISIANA MILK STRIKE IS CALLED OFF BY UNION

NEW ORLEANS, April 4—The Louisiana milk strike was at an end today, after ten days of sporadic violence, some of which resulted in federal charges against 25 men.

The strike ended officially at daylight this morning, as milk started moving from the strife torn areas under an agreement whereby striking AFL teamsters union dairy farmers would call off their activities. The price paid by distributors would be subject to further negotiation.

PITTSBURGH, April 4—A growing concern arose today among the nation's bituminous coal producers that a majority of miners would not return to work Monday when the mourning period for the victims of the Wamac, Ill., disaster ends.

Despite Interior Secretary J. A. Krug's order closing 518 mines for reasons of safety, operators feared united mine workers' locals in many other pits would refuse to work until "safety measures" were taken.

Their fears were heightened by a statement at Logan, W. Va., by local UMW president William Blizard who told a gathering of 1000 miners:

"If Krug shut down 518 mines, we ought to exercise our right, and if 518 others are not safe we should shut them down. We'll only go back to work in the mines that are safe."

miners contacted by International News Service refused to be quoted directly. The lone exception said:

"We always get an April first vacation for two or three weeks. We need it. It gives the operators a chance for repairs."
"We will always have a vacation sometime in the Spring and this is it."

The pit workers don't seem to consider the average pay loss of $75 a week important. They feel that they can afford a couple of weeks' vacation "even if it costs a lot."

Meanwhile, the mine operators estimated that 1,500 to 2,000 men are working steadily on maintenance, while the diggers stay out of the pits.

LOUISIANA MILK STRIKE IS CALLED OFF BY UNION

NEW ORLEANS, April 4—The Louisiana milk strike was at an end today, after ten days of sporadic violence, some of which resulted in federal charges against 25 men.

The strike ended officially at daylight this morning, as milk started moving from the strife torn areas under an agreement whereby striking AFL teamsters union dairy farmers would call off their activities. The price paid by distributors would be subject to further negotiation.

REQUIREMENTS FOR GUARD ENLISTMENT ARE RELAXED

COLUMBUS, O., April 4—Adjutant General Chester W. Goble reported today that requirements for National Guard enlistment by World War II veterans have been relaxed.

Goble said the National Guard bureau in Washington had notified him that veterans with the silver star or higher decoration will be accepted without regard to age requirements until their 55th birthday.

CLOSING OHIO MINES CALLED 'UNWARRANTED'

State Industrial Relations Directors Says Action 'Doesn't Make Sense'

COLUMBUS, O., April 4—State industrial relations director William J. Rogers termed "unwarranted" today the closing of 42 Ohio coal mines by Interior Secretary Krug.

Rogers said yesterday's action "doesn't make sense." He declared:

"The fair thing to have done was to give us some cue on what they were going to do."

"I think hysteria caused this action. If not, then the federal government has been very lax in not calling our attention to any violations."

Rogers quoted his state bureau of mines chief Stephen Williams as saying the closing order was "a bolt out of the blue." Williams said: "I can't understand it."

Previously, the bureau chief had said that Ohio's mines were the safest in the country and that their inspection is "better than any other state." In many instances, he added, Ohio is "stricter than the federal government in the regulations provided."

USED FATS ARE STILL NEEDED, BOGGS WARNS

Although the soap situation has improved slightly in past weeks, there's a grave possibility of the situation taking a turn for the worse unless more used fat can be salvaged by home-makers, John G. Boggs, chairman of the Pickaway county AAA committee, said today.

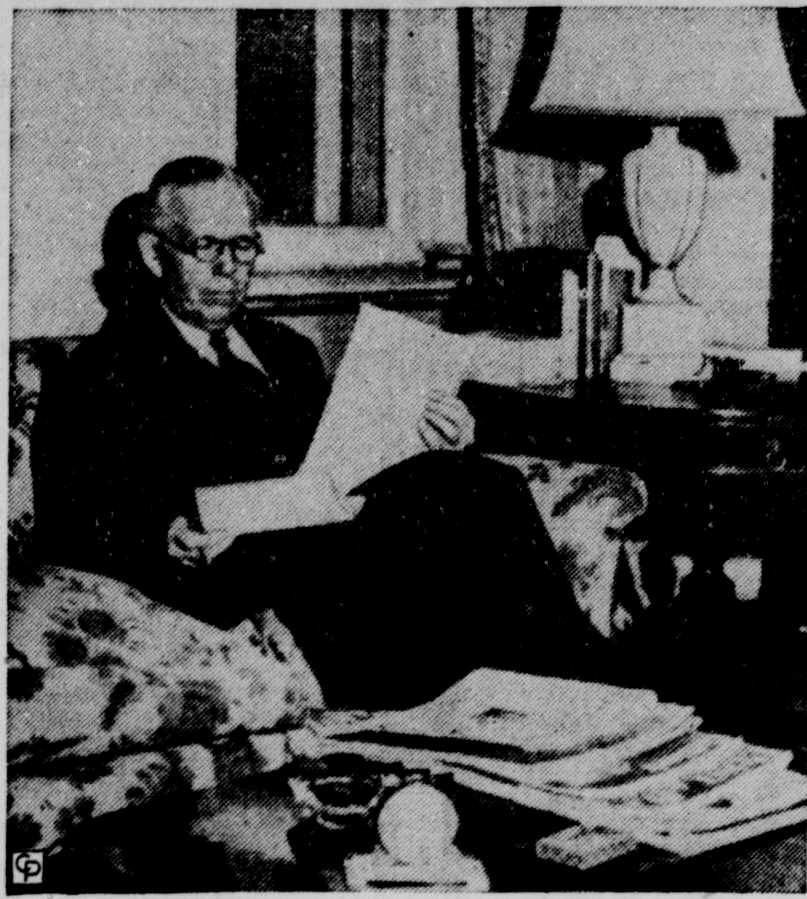

He based his warning on recent surveys made by the United States department of agriculture which indicate the current shortage of fats and oils is just as critical now as during the war. These surveys clearly show that no great amount of relief can be expected until imports of vital fats and oils from the Pacific area return to normal — sometime in the distant future. "The answer is obvious," Mr. Boggs said. "We're going to have to continue leaning on the homemaker and her work in salvaging used kitchen fats if we're to keep the production wheels turning at full speed."

Meanwhile, with industry competition keen on the small available supplies of fats and oils, meat dealers are paying up to 20 cents per pound for used kitchen fats, as compared with the four cents a pound paid before price decontrol.

FOX HOLE RELIGION

PORTLAND, Ore. — Eight Portland pastors, rabbis and bishops said they do not believe much of the so-called "fox-hole religion" has followed American veterans back home. All agreed peacetime religion will have to be "renewed" to keep up the spiritual fervor apparent on both the battle-front and home front.

Big Five Powers Reported Ready To Send Only One Delegate

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., April 4—The Big Five powers are reported ready today to lead the way in limiting their representation to one delegate at the special assembly of the United Nations shortly being summoned to consider Palestine.

A general understanding to that effect between France, Russia, the United States, China and Britain is said to have been decided on to set the pattern for the other 50 member nations.

Although the United Nations charter entitles every country in its ranks to send five delegates and costs for that number are borne by the organization, hopes at Lake Success are that the special assembly will materialize as a body of 55 accredited representatives.

Competent United Nations sources point out that such a limited group would lend itself to speedy and effective work, in addition to enabling it to concentrate on clearing the agenda speedily of the job of setting up a fact-finding commission.

Spokesmen for the big five already have hinted that unless the plan changes between now and the anticipated meeting next month, they will select their special representative from diplomatic or United Nations missions in the United States.

Good Friday at Lake Success suspended all council and committee activity, but plans already are afoot in the secretariat for restoring the general assembly auditorium at Flushing Meadows near New York to an operating capacity.

The first answers to the 54 queries sent by the acting secretary-general on summoning the special assembly are expected here in the next few days. The date for the meeting will be fixed the moment a majority of nations have signalled their consent.

British delegation sources assert that Britain will abide by any solution or recommendation arrived at by the general assembly on Palestine. These sources point out that Foreign Secretary Bevin recently asserted that the attitude of the British government would remain "frozen" pending a decision by the United Nations.

EASTER TALK IS PRESENTED FOR ROTARY MEMBERS

Realities are invisible and the greatest assets of life are those that are unseen.

So declared the Rev. Donald E. Mitchell, pastor of the Presbyterian church, in an Easter season message delivered to members of the Rotary club Thursday following a noon luncheon in the Pickaway Arms.

Quoting from the Bible in his discussion of "The Invisible Value of This World", the speaker asserted that the real world is unseen and that life in the visible and material world is but the pathway to the real.

BELL DECISION ON GRID 'FIX' IS CRITICIZED

Filchok And Hapes Are Indefinitely Suspended For Hearing Bribe

NEW YORK, April 4 — It seemed generally agreed today that Commissioner Bert Bell of the National Football League had rendered the next thing to a flatly rapid decision in the case of Frank Filchok and Merle Hapes.

In a formal statement issued yesterday from the new league headquarters in Philadelphia, Bell announced the indefinite suspension of the New York backfield stars for their passive behavior in last December's bribery plot. Rather singularly, it was last December that Bell announced the indefinite suspension of the same pair for the same reason.

Meanwhile, three men went to jail Wednesday to serve terms up to 10 years on the strength of these developments, which confirmed the following:

That an organized and repeated bribery attempt had been made with Filchok and Hapes the selected puppets and a "fix" of the New York Giants-Chicago Bears championship game its objective. The attempt failed, but not because the two players righteously called the nearest cop.

Instead of turning in Alvin J. Paris, front-man for the syndicate with a wine, women and song complex, they joined him socially and "did" the town with him in the role of perennial guests. During these charming interludes, it was shown that Paris continually high-pressured them to go for the "frame."

He even followed them to the Giants training camp at Bear Mountain and renewed his offer, the top bid being a bribe for each of $2,500, plus individual wagers of $1,000 on the result. The testimony showed they demurred. That two nights before the game.

The next night, Paris was taken into custody, the players were sternly called to account and the explosion came in the small, wan hours of daylight the morning of the game.

Privately, Bell was said to have explained that a weak 1946 rule covering the offense left him no alternative, adding that the rule since had been strengthened to a point where absolute disbarment was called for.

MICKEY OWEN SEEKS $93,908 FROM PASQUELS

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., April 4 — A claim of Mickey Owen, former Brooklyn Dodgers catcher, against Jorge Pasquel, president of the Mexican baseball league, was on file today in federal district court at Springfield.

Owen seeks a judgment by default for a $93,908 counter claim against Pasquel.

Pasquel, in turn, has asked for $127,500 against Owen, who jumped from the Dodgers last season to the Mexican league and was barred from organized baseball in the United States as a result.

TRIBE CLOSES TUCSON CAMP AND HEADS NORTH

TUCSON, Ariz., April 4 — Cleveland closed the door on their Tucson training camp and headed north today in search of fame and glory, or preferably, just a first-division berth.

The Tribe dropped a 2-1 encounter to the Chicago White Sox yesterday in the final game of the Tucson campaign. The victory gave the Pale Hose a 5-4 series advantage. The two clubs will not meet again until the season opener April 15 at the Cleveland stadium.

Cass Michaels, a weak-hitting Chicago second-baseman, proved Indian Don Black's downfall. With the score tied, 1-1, Michaels lifted a home run over the wall in the fifth inning.

BYRON NELSON, JIM DEMARET LEAD MASTERS

NATIONAL GOLF CLUB, AUGUSTA, GA., April 4 — Byron Nelson and Jimmy Demaret step to the tee as pacemakers today in the second round of the 11th annual Masters golf tournament. Lord Nelson and fashion plate Demaret each carded a 69 for the first 18 in the 27 holes of medal play.

Their scores were three strokes below par on the rolling greensward at Augusta, and were the best turned in by 58 top-notch shotmakers who seek the $10,000 in prize money.

Demaret did it the spectacular way. Lady luck smiled on his efforts.

Nelson played it close to the vest — and set gold-dom agog. Twice winner of the coveted Masters crown, Nelson came out of virtual retirement from the links and entered the tournament mainly for the fun of it. He admitted it was a case of an old firehorse suddenly back in the harness.

Par was blasted or equalled by 21 of the entries who scored 72 or less.

Strangely missing among the select list were defending champion Herman Keiser, Akron, O., who carded a 74 and Ben Hogan, Hershey, Pa., a favorite to win, who racked up 75.

Bracketed behind Demaret and Hogan, with scores of 70 were:

Johnny Bulla, Ed Oliver, Wilmington, Del., Freddie Haas, New Orleans, George Schneider, Salt Lake City, Jim Ferrier, Chicago, Johnny Palmer, Badin, N. C., and Lew Worsham, Jr., Washington, D. C., who, on the tricky 15th tallied an eagle as smartly as the veteran Nelson.

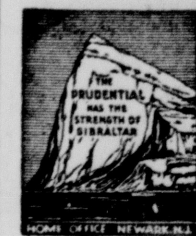

Little carded 71 along with Chick Harbert, Detroit, Carey Middlecoff, Memphis, Herman

ETERNAL ADVENTURE

AN OFFICIAL of the Trans-World Airways in a flight over a remote valley in China saw what he thinks is the biggest pyramid in the world, one that dwarfs the largest in Egypt. It is not far from Sian, ancient capital of the Han dynasty that dates
to the third century before Christ. Chinese authorities admit that such a forgotten relic
of the past may exist in that area. For generations it has been separated from the rest of China by impassable mountains over
which no trails exist and no communications within the memory of modern Chinese.

Since man has taken to wings, no part of the earth can remain isolated. There are to be no more remote regions, no more undiscovered countries, no withdrawing for anyone from the world. Yet the age of discovery is not ending. Even when every little corner of the earth is charted and mapped, youth, every succeeding generation of youth, will want to see for itself.
Though some day there will be nothing really
new under the giant sun, no older can hand down what he has seen or what the years, painful and pleasant, have taught him. Every young man wants the thrill of his own experience. Man always will want to go adventuring. It is the hope of humanity.

FROM FOES TO FRIENDS

OLD NATIONAL enmities do not always
last forever. Greece and Turkey, alike affected by the Communist menace, are standing side by side. Yet for centuries they were bitter enemies.

The Turks conquered Greece in the 15th century, and for three centuries and a half were a blight to the country. Greedy tax gatherers carried off almost everything
valuable, and the best youths were enslaved or made soldiers. Finally in 1821 the Greeks revolted, and with European help gained independence. The Turks still, however, ruled the Eastern Mediterranean islands and Asia Minor. Turkish tyranny brought on a war with Greece in 1897, in which the Greeks were no match for their old masters. Still another war took place in 1912, the first Balkan war, in which Greece and her neighbors finally overcame
the Turks.

Yet despite all these wars, aided by an exchange of population in the 1920's, the peoples became friends. Old grievances were removed or forgotten, and the two countries are on good terms today.

If the Turks and Greeks can do this, other
inverate enemies may yet become reconciled.

ASSIGNMENT: AMERICA

By Kenneth L. Dixon

WASHINGTON, April 4 — Other American cities now suffering from the postwar plague of promiscuous pistol packing might do well to pluck a page from Washington's
book and unlimber that old concealed weapon
law.

They might find their cops can't enforce
it. And they might do something about it.

Washington discovered just that the other day. And right now there is a popular move afoot to plug up the legal loophole
and stop this indiscriminate plugging of innocent parties.

According to corporation counsel Vernon E. West, the whole thing was simply an oversight back in the days when the district firearms law was passed. But whatever the cause, there was no clause giving
police the power to arrest and search people suspected of carrying concealed weapons—without a warrant.

For many years, the oversight was ignored since, despite the shouts of "robber"
and "crook" on capitol hill, the District of Columbia is not normally cluttered up with hidden heaters or hot-rod men.

Came the end of the recent hostilities and
a surplus of shooting irons, both native-
born and souvenir-sired overseas, began to show up with bulging regularity about the city. Many an erstwhile law-abiding citizen couldn't resist the civilian urge or the service habit of going around heeled.

Naturally, the crime curve zoomed, since
some such characters always insist on testing their new pocket or armpit artillery.

So the capital cops set out to stop it, and promptly got slapped down — both legally and lethally.

The courtroom awakening came first.

One night a pair of patrolmen picked up
a beefy party lounging outside a well-known
bistro famed for its bulging cash registers
at that hour of the eve. They thought they detected a hunk of hidden hardware on his hip, so they grabbed him up by the arms
quick-like and gave his pants pocket the old
pat-pat routine.

Sure enough, their hunch was right. So they unholstered his gun, hauled out the handcuffs and carted him off to the clink.
The boss of the bistro beamed and even the desk sergeant smiled. It seemed to be one stick-up sweetly stymied, even though
the only charge was carrying a concealed weapon.

But came trial day and a smart lawyer
dusted off the loophole and let them have
it. Since they hadn't caught the guy in the act of committing a crime, they had no right to search him in the first place. Thus their testimony was gained in an illegal manner.

Regretfully, the judge agreed — and the hot-rod man smirked at the two cops and walked out, scot-free!

Three or four more cases like that the cops learned their lesson. They quit searching suspicious guys unless they actually
spotted them doing something illegal.

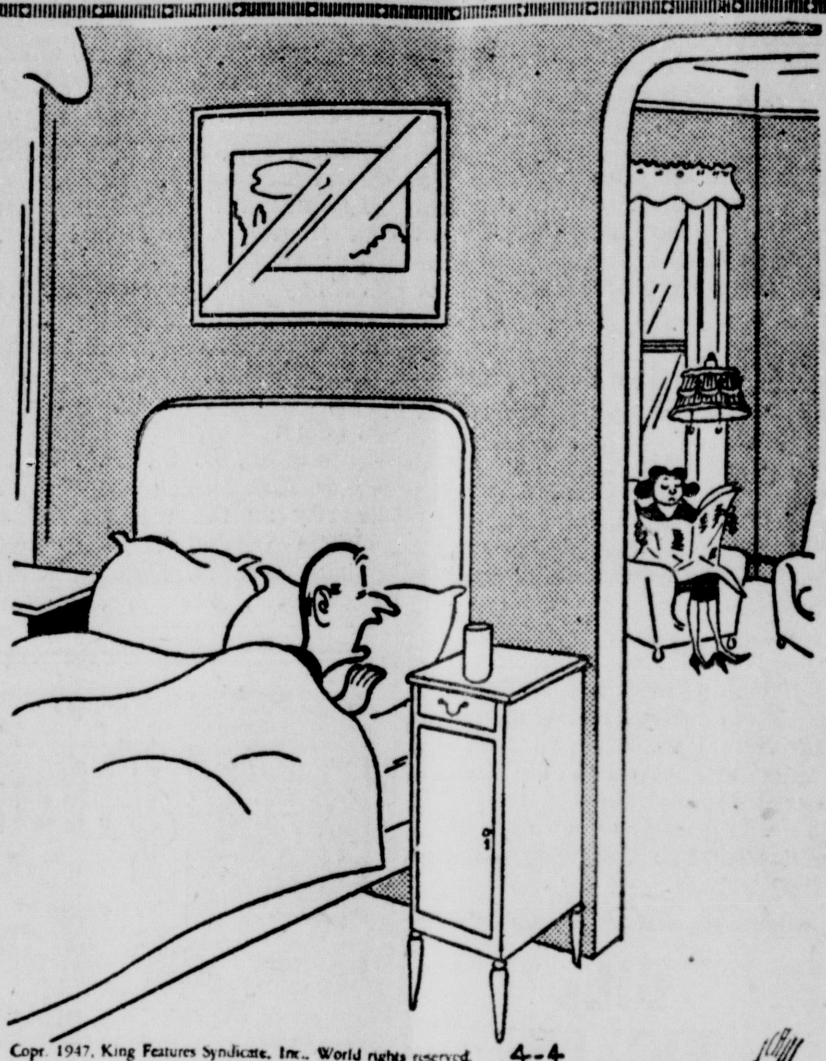

The sequel was sudden and sad.

In a matter of weeks, no less than four policemen were shot while seeking to question suspects whom they hadn't searched.
In addition, it was a matter of common knowledge that half a dozen holdups — at least one of which was fatal—might have been prevented had the cops been able to search questionable characters loitering
along their beats.

Thus Washington has paid the price for its 15-year-old oversight. Now, the move is underway to correct it.

But such legal changes come the hard way here in the district. The capital city is controlled by congress, which means

Errors in Raising Children

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
TODAY juvenile delinquency
has reached an all-time peak in the United States. All sorts of things
—the decay of the home, poverty,
moral laxity—have been held to blame. And in part they are. But the fact remains that much of the wrongdoing on the part of youngsters would never occur if parents would take the trouble to learn the proper methods of rearing their children.

And not only wrongdoing, but
the emotional instability which causes so much unhappiness and
even future emotional disorders
may be entirely forestalled by correct handling during early childhood.

Serious Errors
According to Dr. Robert P.
Knight of Topeka, Kansas, there
are four things which lead parents
into serious errors in bringing up their children. The first is the idea that everybody knows enough
about human nature to rear children if they just use common sense.
But "common sense" is only the total of one's own experiences and misinformation.

The second fault is the tendency
to try to rear children just as the parents themselves were reared or
to swing to the opposite extreme.
For example, if during their childhood the parents were treated in a strict manner they are likely to be overindulgent with their children and vice versa. Of course, neither of these methods is a sound basis for bringing up youngsters.

Third Misconception
The third misconception is that children should be as little nuisance or trouble as possible. As a result, parents try to make the child into a little adult as quickly as possible. They want him to be docile, clean, quiet and obedient.
Of course, attempts to make the child conform to these ideas only
lead to resentment and misbehavior.

The fourth difficulty lies in the attempt on the part of parents to adopt each new idea that they hear concerning child rearing. So they jump back and forth from over-indulgence to strict discipline, and consequently the child only becomes confused and resentful.

Conditions Which Arise
As a result of these wrong ways
of rearing children such things as lying, stealing, impudence and similar conditions arise. Most children under seven or eight years of age are unable to tell truth from fancy. Meeting the child's emotional problems and making the truth easy to tell are effective ways of overcoming this bad habit.

The same type of attitude should exist toward stealing. The stolen article should always be returned, if possible or, if not, paid
for out of the child's allowance.
The youngster must be taught
what is meant by property rights
but to warn the child of police and
jail and to frighten him will do no
good.

So-called impudence or talking
back of course, should not be encouraged but a child should always be given a right to state his case, and given a chance to explain
his feelings.

Parents owe it to the child to learn the proper methods of child
training from reliable authorities.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR
VAL CARRINGTON'S bedroom,
which was connected with that of her husband by a lavish bath, was
a large, beautifully furnished
room, luxurious almost to the point
of being sybaritic. The color scheme was peach and ivory, with effective touches of bright blue.
The decor was modern. An ivory shag rug covered the floor, the windows were hung with diagonally
striped blue and peach satin.
The bed was low and wide, with a tufted, peach-colored headboard, a blue satin spread and a nest of ivory silk-and-lace pillows.

It was a bed fit for a queen.
And in it Val lay like a queen, her
pale hair spreading across the little pillows, her eyes closed, so that the incredible black length of her lashes touched her cheeks, soft as a caress.

But Val wasn't sleeping. She simply did not feel like making the effort of opening her eyes. She didn't quite have a hang-over—not quite. But she felt lousy. Her head ached and her mouth tasted
dry and unpleasant. And, as she lay there, hiding from wakefulness
as long as possible, the memory of the quarrel she and Wade had had the night before struck at her.
The quarrel that had terminated
with Wade saying brutally, "Oh,
go to bed. You're not yourself.
But we'll have to talk in the morning—we've got to get things
straightened out."

So now it was morning, Val
thought, and no wonder she didn't want to wake up. Maybe, though,
she'd slept late enough so that
Wade would have left for the office.
But no, it wasn't likely.
Wade's working hours were elastic,
often he didn't go down to La Salle Street at all. And he'd been up just as late last night as she, he'd be just as tired. Even more so, Val reflected with a touch of malice. Look how much older he was.

She buried her smooth cheek
more deeply in the silken smoothness of the pillows. Oh, blast it!
Why did they quarrel so much?
She hated quarreling. Sometimes she almost hated Wade. She would hate him if he kept on being so utterly pig-headed and unreasonable, so different than she had expected him to be.

It had all been quite wonderful at first. The early weeks of their marriage had been just as Val had anticipated. Their honeymoon in the south. Long lazy sun-filled days, spent lying on fabulous
beaches, splashing through smooth sapphire surf. Wade, tanned and handsome in swimming trunks,
kissing her bare shoulder, whispering outrageous nonsense into her ear. A gay coterie of kindred spirits had sprung up about them
at every great resort hotel at which they stopped. Val had loved it all. The days had been too short for their glamorous pursuits. The nights had been sheer magic, filled

with music and dancing and love-
making. Val had been passionatly responsive to Wade's ardor.
She had been convinced their marriage was a wise thing, that in it
they could both find happiness, and
the forgetfulness of all that had gone before, the bitter sense of loss from which she had been afraid she could never escape.

Even when they got home Val
had seen no reason why their life
shouldn't continue to be a gay round of pleasure. It had proved impossible to rent an apartment,
but Wade's bachelor quarters were luxuriously adequate. Val had been happy and busy, having the place re-done by the current interior decorator. There had been parties in their honor, they had entertained in turn, everything had been just as Val had hoped for.
Naturally, she had assumed Wade was satisfied, too. Why shouldn't he be?

The knowledge that Wade wasn't satisfied had come to her so gradually she couldn't have said just
when she knew it for a fact.
"Do we have to go out tonight
—again? Val, let's slow down a bit."
The first time Wade had said
that Val broke the date in question agreeably enough. She assumed merely that he was tired,
that perhaps he wasn't feeling quite up to par. They had stayed at home, Val remembered, and she worn one of the glamorous
lounging robes from her trousseau.
She had lain on the couch before the fireplace and Wade had sat beside her, holding her close and kissing her, telling her how much
he loved her, how wonderful she was.

Val had enjoyed it. But when he began wanting to spend more
and more evenings at home—well,
there were limits! Val was young,
she liked a very gay time. Wade was forty. He had been having a gay time for a good many years.
But he was beginning to grow a little tired, somewhat surfeited. And there was another thing...

As time passed and the months
of their marriage added up, they quarrelled with increasing frequency, with mounting heat.
"You're getting to be an old man!" Val accused furiously.
"Only a few months older than
I was when you married me," Wade snapped back, resentful.
"But—you were different then.
We had such fun always. You liked going places, doing things, being with our friends. It was a part of what I loved in you."

"I love you—just you, Val. Not the chasing around, the whole crazy whirl. Don't you see, if that was all I wanted, there'd have been no point in my marrying. I could have had the other with any number of other girls. Gay companions are a dime a dozen. But it was you I fell in love with, you I wanted for my wife. Only—I thought you'd grow up when we were married."

"Grow up?" There was hot young scorn in Val's voice. "Don't you mean settle down?"
"Maybe I do! Is there anything wrong with settling down? Or do you intend to go rushing crazy
on all the rest of your life, from one night club to another?"
It wasn't one quarrel. It was a composite of countless quarrels,
big and little. Bitter words, spoken
in anger, remembered, resented,
left festering in the mind. And in between, passionate reconciliations, intervals of truce, lasting
days or weeks, but always eventually broken.

And now, Val thought, her eyes
still closed, her cheek still pressing
her silken pillows, the basic cause
of it all had finally been brought out into the open. Last night, for the first time, Wade had admitted
what was in his mind, what he undoubtedly had been working up
to from the start.
Wade wanted a child.
Val recalled how she had taunt-
ed, after that first blank moment
of incredulity, "But why bestow
such an unheard-of honor on me,
pet? It wouldn't be fair to your
other wives."

She shouldn't have said that,
of course. But she had been so furious—and just a little intoxicated. And the very idea was absurd. A child—why, that wouldn't fit in at all with the gay, carefree
pattern of her marriage!
For a moment she had thought Wade was going to strike her. His dark eyes had blazed, his lips had drawn back a little from his teeth.
But the hand he had begun to lift
had fallen back heavily to his side.
He had sworn at her then, had told her to go to bed. He had accused her of drinking too much
and had said they must talk in the morning.
But I don't want to talk to him,
Val thought rebelliously. And I won't bear his child. Why should I? How was I to know he had any such idea? And I certainly never led him to believe that children played a part in my plans for our future together. It's so unreasonable of him—so out of character.
Something inside her head,
something that seemed wholly apart from her, argued back: But it isn't unreasonable. It's quite logical, really. You should have suspected it from the start, from
the moment he asked you to marry him. Otherwise, why would not he have simply kept on playing around with Susan and the others? If that was what he wanted—all he wanted.
But I won't, she thought, I won't!

ETERNAL ADVENTURE

AN OFFICIAL of the Trans-World Airways in a flight over a remote valley in China saw what he thinks is the biggest pyramid in the world, one that dwarfs the largest in Egypt. It is not far from Sian, ancient capital of the Han dynasty that dates to the third century before Christ. Chinese authorities admit that such a forgotten relic of the past may exist in that area. For generations it has been separated from the rest of China by impassable mountains over which no trails exist and no communications within the memory of modern Chinese.

Since man has taken to wings, no part of the earth can remain isolated. There are to be no more remote regions, no more undiscovered countries, no withdrawing for anyone from the world. Yet the age of discovery is not ending. Even when every little corner of the earth is charted and mapped, youth, every succeeding generation of youth, will want to see for itself. TODAY juvenile delinquency has reached an all-time peak in the United States. All sorts of things—the decay of the home, poverty, moral laxity—have been held to blame. And in part they are. But the fact remains that much of the wrongdoing on the part of youngsters would never occur if parents would take the trouble to learn the proper methods of rearing their children.

And not only wrongdoing, but the emotional instability which causes so much unhappiness and even future emotional disorders may be entirely forestalled by correct handling during early childhood.

Serious Errors

According to Dr. Robert P. Knight of Topeka, Kansas, there are four things which lead parents into serious errors in bringing up their children. The first is the idea that everybody knows enough about human nature to rear children if they just use common sense. But "common sense" is only the total of one's own experiences and misinformation.

The second fault is the tendency to try to rear children just as the parents themselves were reared or to swing to the opposite extreme. For example, if during their childhood the parents were treated in a strict manner they are likely to be overindulgent with their children and vice versa. Of course, neither of these methods is a sound basis for bringing up youngsters.

Third Misconception

The third misconception is that children should be as little nuisances as possible.

So-called impudence or talking back of course, should not be encouraged but a child should always be given a right to state his case, and given a chance to explain his feelings.

Parents owe it to the child to learn the proper methods of child training from reliable authorities.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR
VAL CARRINGTON'S bedroom, which was connected with that of her husband by a lavish bath, was a large, beautifully furnished room, luxurious almost to the point of being sybaritic. The color scheme was peach and ivory, with effective touches of bright blue. The decor was modern. An ivory ash rug covered the floor, the windows were hung with diagonally striped blue and peach satin. The bed was low and wide, with a tufted, peach-colored headboard, a blue satin spread and a nest of ivory silk-and-lace pillows.

It was a bed fit for a queen. And in it Val lay like a queen, her pale hair spreading across the little pillows, her eyes closed, so that the incredible black length of her lashes touched her cheeks, soft as a caress.

But Val wasn't sleeping. She simply did not feel like making the effort of opening her eyes. She didn't quite have a hang-over—not quite. But she felt lousy. Her head ached and her mouth tasted dry and unpleasant. And, as she lay there, hiding from wakefulness as long as possible, the memory of the quarrel she and Wade had had the night before struck at her.

The quarrel that had terminated with Wade saying brutally, "Oh, go to bed. You're not yourself. But we'll have to talk in the morning—we've got to get things straightened out."

So now it was morning, Val thought, and no wonder she didn't want to wake up. Maybe, though, she'd slept late enough so that Wade would have left for the office. But no, it wasn't likely. Wade's working hours were elastic, often he didn't go down to La Salle Street at all. And he'd been up just as late last night as she, he'd be just as tired. Even more so.

Val reflected with a touch of malice. Look how much older he was. She buried her smooth cheek more deeply in the silken smoothness of the pillows. Oh, blast it! Why did they quarrel so much? She hated quarreling. Sometimes she almost hated Wade. She would hate him if he kept on being so utterly pig-headed and unreasonable, so different than she had expected him to be.

It had all been quite wonderful at first. The early weeks of their marriage had been just as Val had anticipated. Their honeymoon in the south. Long lazy sun-drenched days, spent lying on fabulous beaches, splashing through smooth sapphire surf. Wade, tanned and handsome in swimming trunks, kissing her bare shoulder, whispering outrageous nonsense into her ear. A gay coterie of kindred spirits had sprung up about them at every great resort hotel at which they stopped. Val had loved it all. The days had been too short for their glamorous pursuits. The nights had been sheer magic, filled with music and dancing and love-making. Val had been passionately responsive to Wade's ardor. She had been convinced their marriage was a wise thing, that in it they could both find happiness, and the forgetfulness of all that had gone before, the bitter sense of loss from which she had been afraid she could never escape.

Even when they got home Val shouldn't continue to be a round of pleasure. It had proved impossible to rent an apartment, but Wade's bachelor quarters were luxuriously adequate. Val had been happy and busy, having the place re-done by the current interior decorator. There had been parties in their honor, they had entertained in turn, everything had been just as Val had hoped for. Naturally, she had assumed Wade was satisfied, too. Why shouldn't he be?

The knowledge that Wade wasn't satisfied had come to her so gradually she couldn't have said just when she knew it for a fact.

"Do we have to go out tonight—again? Val, let's slow down a bit."

The first time Wade had said that Val broke the date in question agreeably enough. She assumed merely that he was tired, that perhaps he wasn't feeling quite up to par. They had stayed at home, Val remembered, and she had worn one of the glamorous lounging robes from her trousseau. She had lain on the couch before the fireplace and Wade had sat beside her, holding her close and kissing her, telling her how much he loved her, how wonderful she was.

Val had enjoyed it. But when he began wanting to spend more and more evenings at home—well, there were limits! Val was young, she liked a very gay time. Wade was forty. He had been having a gay time for a good many years. He was beginning to grow a little tired, somewhat surfeited. And there was another thing...

As time passed and the months of their marriage added up, they quarreled with increasing frequency, with mounting heat.

"You're getting to be an old man!" Val accused furiously.

"Only a few months older than I was when you married me," Wade snapped back, resentful.

"But you were different then. We had such fun always. You liked going places, doing things, being with our friends. It was a part of what I loved in you."

"I love you—just you, Val. Not the chasing around, the whole crazy whirl. Don't you see, if that was all I wanted, there'd have been no point in my marrying. I could have had the other with any number of other girls. Gay companions are a dime a dozen. But it was you I fell in love with, you I wanted for my wife. Only—I thought you'd grow up when we were married."

"Grow up?" There was hot young scorn in Val's voice. "Don't you mean settle down?"

"Maybe I do! Is there anything wrong with settling down? Or do you intend to go rushing crazily on all the rest of your life, from one night club to another?"

It wasn't one quarrel. It was a composite of countless quarrels, big and little. Bitter words, spoken in anger, remembered, resented, left festering in the mind. And in between, passionate reconciliations, intervals of truce, lasting days or weeks, but always eventually broken.

And now, Val thought, her eyes still closed, her cheek still pressing her silken pillows, the basic cause of it all had finally been brought out into the open. Last night, for the first time, Wade had admitted what was in his mind, what he undoubtedly had been working up to from the start.

Wade wanted a child.

Val recalled how she had taunted, after that first blank moment of incredulity, "But why bestow such an unheard-of honor on me, pet? It wouldn't be fair to your other wives."

She shouldn't have said that, of course. But she had been so furious—and just a little intoxicated. And the very idea was absurd. A child—why, that wouldn't fit in at all with the gay, carefree pattern of her marriage!

For a moment she had thought Wade was going to strike her. His dark eyes had blazed, his lips had drawn back a little from his teeth. But the hand he had begun to lift had fallen back heavily to his side. He had sworn at her then, had told her to go to bed. He had accused her of drinking too much and had said they must talk in the morning...

But I don't want to talk to him, Val thought rebelliously. And I won't bear his child. Why should I? How was I to know he had any such idea? And I certainly never let him to believe that children played a part in my plans for our future together. It's so unreasonable of him—so out of character.

Something inside her head, something that seemed wholly apart from her, argued back: But it isn't unreasonable. It's quite logical, really. You should have suspected it from the start, from the moment he asked you to marry him. Otherwise, why would not he have simply kept on playing around with Susan and the others? If that was what he wanted—all he wanted.

But I won't, she thought, I won't!

Morris EUB Aid Society Meets With Mrs. Kerns

Thirty-six members and visitors were present Thursday afternoon for the regular meeting of the Morris Evangelical United Brethren church Ladies Aid, held in the home of Mrs. Minnie Kerns, Saticeek township, who was assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Karl Anderson.

Program opened with the group singing "Higher Ground". Scripture readings and prayer were presented by Mrs. V. D. Kerns. Mrs. Marvin Musselman presented the secretary's report. Each member paid the price of one dozen eggs for her Easter offering. Names of the unknown sisters were made known during the gift exchange.

Mrs. Kerns showed colored slides of the crucifixion and resurrection as Mrs. Paul Dawson read from the Scriptures. Group joined in singing songs in keeping with the slides. The Rev. Carl Butterbaugh read from the Scriptures and presented a prayer. Mrs. Dawson concluded the program by asking the members to join with her in repeating the Apostle's creed. Lord's prayer was repeated in unison. Hostesses served refreshments during the social hours.

If you use correct drying methods they will help to make your clothes and household articles wear longer. Care will also save time by making the garments easier to iron. Avoid excessive heat while drying clothes. Don't dry articles on top of a hot radiator, in or on top of a hot oven. If you live in an apartment and use one of the large gas dryers, don't bake your clothes. Keep the jets turned up only half way. Intense heat is harmful to all types of fabrics.

Miss Mary V. Holman, West Orange, New Jersey, director of guidance, department of Orange public schools, spent Wednesday and Thursday with Mrs. William Foreman, South Scioto street. While in Ohio, Miss Holman attended national meeting for deans of schools and colleges in United States, held in Neil house, Columbus. Her father, Dr. A. W. Holman, and Mrs. Holman recently moved from Urbana to their new home in Columbus.

MRS. SPROUSE IS SPEAKER AT WSCS MEETING

Members of Woman's Society of Christian Service of First Methodist church gathered in the church parlors, Thursday afternoon for their regular session.

Mrs. L. S. Lytle, president, was in charge of the meeting. After the short business session Mrs. Charles Rader, presented the selected program. Mrs. Robert Liston conducted the devotional period.

Mrs. W. L. Sprouse spoke on the topic, "One Hundred Years in China" and Mrs. F. L. Mangum read, "Easter in other Lands". Circle 3 had the most members on attendance.

Suede articles can be brushed clean with a stiff brush or a very fine sandpaper, then brightened with suede dressing of matching color.

Give a coat of liquid floor wax to black galoshes that look gray. The same applies to rubber floor mats. It is a help.

GIRL SCOUT NEWS

TROOP 1

Girl Scout troop No. 1 with Miss Doris Schreiner, leader and Miss Ann Curtin, assistant leader, opened their meeting Wednesday evening with roll call and collection of dues. Decision was made to have a party at Girl Scout lodge May 4. Girls decided to sell Girl Scout cookies and discussed plans for making a scrapbook, "The World Trefoil Badge".

Group rehearsed introductions for "Hostess Badge". Miss Schreiner taught the group "Our Chant Song" in French. Norma Howard, Pat Johnson and Nancy Bowers served the refreshments that they had made for the hostess badge. Folk dancing concluded the evening.

Weather Bureau Planes Now Intercept Check Up on Storms Headed U. S.-Ward

ON WEATHER FLIGHT—Lt. Jack Buchanan, weather observer, reads the psychrometer (in ceiling of pilot's cabin) at an altitude of 10,000 feet during the first weather flight from Merced, Cal., to Anchorage.

By JOHN L. KENT

Central Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON — One way of finding out what the weather tomorrow will be is to fly out and meet it coming. That is exactly what the Army Air Forces are doing.

Data on weather which originates in the Gulf of Alaska and reaches the west coast two days later is being provided the United States Weather Bureau as a result of daily flights of specially equipped Army Air Forces planes of the 59th Weather Reconnaissance Squadron.

Hourly meteorological reports radioed to AAF weather stations from a Boeing B-29 Superfortress cruising over the North Pacific are helping solve the weather mystery of that vast area.

Under command of Lt. Col. Karl T. Rauk, weather planes execute daily flights of 2,462 miles from Castle Field at Merced, Cal., to Anchorage, Alaska. They cover the "brewing ground" for much of the bad weather which vitally affects the United States, particularly the west coastal area, and are making the first regular aerial weather observations ever taken over these far northern waters.

of the Easter trilogy, is broadcast on "The Greatest Story Ever Told," Sunday. But despite their plan to guard against revival of belief in the Master's divine powers to arise from the dead, His body vanishes.

Paul Lukas, distinguished Broadway and Hollywood star, and former Academy Award winner, makes his first appearance on "Exploring the Unknown," in "Fury of Man," Sunday. The broadcast will present Lukas as a university professor who employs a scientific technique to eradicate bigotry in a college town.

Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians will make their fourth tour in six months early in May when they leave New York again for concerts and radio broadcasts in Boston and Portland, Me. Definite dates for these two appearances have not been set. A tour of the Midwest was made by the Pennsylvanians late last November; they "took to the road" again in February for appearances in a number of southern cities; and they have just returned from a 12-day trip which included concerts and broadcasts in Chicago, Des Moines, Memphis, St. Louis and Louisville.

Rumor has it that John J. Anthony will return to the air with a new program and a new sponsor very soon. Program, called "Opportunity Hour," is to be given "sneak preview" in one of Mutual's theaters in New York on Tuesday. Same program is also to be auditioned for the same sponsor by ABC same week.

Unknown Disease Taking Toll of Young Pickaway County Pigs

FARMERS REPORT HEAVY LOSSES IN HOG CROPS

Isolation Advised To Help Check Spread Of New Threat To Pigs

Pickaway county farmers have reported severe losses of newly farrowed pigs, it was stated Friday by County Agricultural Agent Larry A. Best, and the highest death rate has occurred before the pigs are one week old.

Members of the veterinary department at Ohio State University have examined pigs in herds where losses have occurred and they have found no effective treatment.

The disease somewhat resembles infectious enteritis. Symptoms are scours, rough coats of hair, vomiting, emaciation, and sometimes a yellowish skin color. The death rate for pigs has been almost 100 per cent of those who have been sick.

The disease appears to be caused by a virus, and it travels rapidly from litter to litter. The veterinarians advise immediate isolation of the sow and her litter if any pig in the litter shows any of the disease symptoms. Some sows acquire the disease and part of the sick sows have died.

Persons who care for healthy pigs should not tend those which are sick. Dogs and livestock should be prevented from carrying contagion from such hogs to healthy ones. Sows which have not already farrowed should be put out on clean ground.

Some of the largest losses of pigs have been reported from farms where excellent sanitary conditions have been provided for the hogs. Operators of the farms are experienced hog raisers, and the feeding practices have been better than average. Case records indicate this is a new disease of is some type of virus which suddenly has developed virulence. Indiana hog raisers reported a somewhat similar malady in 1946, but inquiries sent to that state indicate the trouble has not reappeared there this year.

SURVEY SHOWS HEALTH NEED

cated at the Lockbourne Army Air Base.

IT WAS pointed out that Uncle Sam's clinic at Lockbourne now administers what is known as the "11-day rapid cure for syphilis" at no expense to the patient. It was likewise emphasized that a blood test to determine the presence of syphilis can be obtained at the government clinic at Lockbourne for the nominal fee of $1.

Police Chief William F. McCrady disclosed that recently he transported several persons to the Lockbourne Air Base clinic to undergo the "rapid" treatment for curing syphilis. He also said that it was quite possible there are a number of cases in Circleville not under treatment and that there are other instances in which the victim of syphilis does not suspect that he or she has the disease.

Dr. Blackburn expressed the opinion that there is not an unusual number of syphilis cases in the city and county. He said that occasionally someone appears voluntarily at his office seeking either a blood test or treatment for syphilis. In the former, Dr. Blackburn explained, the test is taken and the blood sample is sent to the state laboratory at Columbus for analysis. In the latter cases the applicants, he said, are sent to the Lockbourne clinic for the "11-day treatment."

The county health commissioner also took occasion to minimize the danger of contracting syphilis in eating places and from food handled by syphilis sufferers. He declared that idea was quite exaggerated in the minds of many laymen.

JUVENILE Judge Sterling M. Lamb voiced the opinion that there are quite a number of syphilis cases in the city and county. He revealed that during recent months several minors have appeared in juvenile court and that blood tests disclosed they suffered from the disease. He explained that the court had sent "five or six" of those juveniles to the Lockbourne clinic for treatment.

A check of physicians disclosed that a number of persons are usually under treatment for the disease by private physicians but no definite figures were obtainable as to the number and some of the doctors were hesitant to voice an opinion as to whether there is at this time an abnormal syphilis situation in Circleville. However, virtually all agreed on the necessity for proper facilities to combat the disease.

Although a state law requires that all persons employed in restaurants or in other places where they handle food to undergo a blood test and to present a certificate showing they are free from syphilis and while many Ohio cities have ordinances patterned after this state law Circleville has no such ordinance.

City Solicitor George Gerhardt, Council Clerk Fred Nicholas and Mayor Ben H. Gordon all asserted the city has no such regulation although Councilman William M. Reid said he believed he recalled seeing an ordinance having been enacted a number of years ago.

MAYOR GORDON said that the state law applies to Circleville and that the matter of inspecting food stores and restaurants and to see that employees comply with the state law is a matter which the city safety director is required to look after.

Safety Director Thurman I. Miller said that he has made some inspections of this type but that facilities are lacking for its complete and proper enforcement. He cited the need for a unified health setup. He is in charge of the Berger hospital, a municipal institution, and he pointed out that the hospital has no venereal disease clinic. The safety director declared Circleville should have such a clinic, with facilities for treatment of such diseases including syphilis.

Director Miller and other officials said that about three years ago an official of the state department of health visited Circleville, surveyed the situation, appeared before the city council, and made specific suggestions for the control of venereal diseases, but the council took no action along that line.

Last November the Pickaway County Medical Society, following a thorough investigation by a special committee of that group, met in monthly session and definitely proposed a merger of the city and county boards of health with a physician as health commissioner of the new setup, a nurse, clerk, sanitarian, and a laboratory technician.

The recommendation embraced tentative plans for general sanitation, milk plant inspection, dairy inspection, inspection of restaurants and food stores, laboratory service, control of venereal disease, control of tuberculosis, control of communicable disease, morbidity service, crippled children's service, school hygiene, nursing service, immunization of school children, physical examination of school children, and vital statistics and state reports.

Dr. Blackburn said that at present applicants at the city health office for blood tests are usually referred to the county health office.

He also said that it was quite possible there are a number of cases in Circleville not under treatment and that there are other instances in which the victim of syphilis does not suspect that he or she has the disease.

Dr. Blackburn expressed the opinion that there is not an unusual number of syphilis cases in the city and county. He said that occasionally someone appears voluntarily at his office seeking either a blood test or treatment for syphilis. In the former, Dr. Blackburn explained, the test is taken and the blood sample is sent to the state laboratory at Columbus for analysis. In the latter cases the applicants, he said, are sent to the Lockbourne clinic for the "11-day treatment."

The county health commissioner also took occasion to minimize the danger of contracting syphilis in eating places and from food handled by syphilis sufferers. He declared that idea was quite exaggerated in the minds of many laymen.

JUVENILE Judge Sterling M. Lamb voiced the opinion that there are quite a number of syphilis cases in the city and county. He revealed that during recent months several minors have appeared in juvenile court and that blood tests disclosed they suffered from the disease. He explained that the court had sent "five or six" of those juveniles to the Lockbourne clinic for treatment.

A check of physicians disclosed that a number of persons are usually under treatment for the disease by private physicians but no definite figures were obtainable as to the number and some of the doctors were hesitant to voice an opinion as to whether there is at this time an abnormal syphilis situation in Circleville. However, virtually all agreed on the necessity for proper facilities to combat the disease.

Although a state law requires that all persons employed in restaurants or in other places where they handle food to undergo a blood test and to present a certificate showing they are free from syphilis and while many Ohio cities have ordinances patterned after this state law Circleville has no such ordinance.

City Solicitor George Gerhardt, Council Clerk Fred Nicholas and Mayor Ben H. Gordon all asserted the city has no such regulation although Councilman William M. Reid said he believed he recalled such an ordinance having been enacted a number of years ago.

MAYOR GORDON said that the state law applies to Circleville and that the matter of inspecting food stores and restaurants and to see that employees comply with the state law is a matter which the city safety director is required to look after.

Safety Director Thurman I. Miller said that he has made some inspections of this type but that facilities are lacking for its complete and proper enforcement. He cited the need for a unified health setup. He is in charge of the Berger hospital, a municipal institution, and he pointed out that the hospital has no venereal disease clinic. The safety director declared Circleville should have such a clinic, with facilities for treatment of such diseases including syphilis.

Director Miller and other officials said that about three years ago an official of the state department of health visited Circleville, surveyed the situation, appeared before the city council, and made specific suggestions for the control of venereal

diseases, but the council took no action along that line.

Last November the Pickaway County Medical Society, following a thorough investigation by a special committee of that group, met in monthly session and definitely proposed a merger of the city and county boards of health with a physician as health commissioner of the new setup, a nurse, clerk, sanitarian, and a laboratory technician.

The recommendation embraced tentative plans for general sanitation, milk plant inspection, dairy inspection, inspection of restaurants and food stores, laboratory service, control of venereal disease, control of tuberculosis, control of communicable disease, morbidity service, crippled children's service, school hygiene, nursing service, immunization of school children, physical examination of school children, and vital statistics and state reports.

Dr. Blackburn said that at present applicants at the city health office for blood tests are usually referred to the county health office.
